The 2018 ECPR Summer School on International Relations provides encompassing courses on various aspects of the politics of interdependence. Through a variety of courses taught by renowned IR scholars, students will learn about research on the politics of interdependence from various theoretical and methodological perspectives and across a wide range of issue areas including economic relations, security and monetary unions. In addition, the Summer School will connect students to an international forum of researchers and enable them to build an academic network with other junior and senior scholars in IR. Students will have the opportunity to present and discuss their own research to get feedback from the instructors and the other students.
